Feb 2, 2022, 10:42 AM ✓

What did he say. ?

Feb 2, 2022, 10:43 AM

That you have the option to declare a state of emergency, not sure what powers it would trigger, but we were left with the impression there is something more than is currently being done. My honest thought is that you need to step in, people are desperate to see leadership. Hold a news conference/ at the very least. Tell the protestors their time us up. Ottawa residents are paying too high a price for their calls for freedom.

@gmacofglebe

I want to say this with kindness and compassion. I truly thought you had some of the better questions last week. And I can tell you I harangued Councillors not to vote for Harder. Which made it really difficult when you ultimately stepped down. Warren Kinsella. You must be familiar with him and if you're not then don't RT him. He is incredibly divisive and that tweet is so off base and insulting to the people that want this to be over. People that live in the same city as you and I Carol Anne, unlike Kinsella. Please stop tweeting things so quickly, without thinking them through. I am basing that advice to you by what got you into trouble last weekend, as you said so yourself at Council. Political advice? Keep repeating what you said last night on CBC. That there has to be an investigation of what happened at the beginning. The Citizen and Star have reported that the federal government asked for no trucks on Wellington, and Chief Sioy denied that. That is where this starts in my humble opinion. I can't imagine what the last few days have been like for you. You gave a hint of that in your interviews yesterday. But suggesting any of us are happy to see violence when we should be celebrating Family Day weekend, that's not helpful. Again, just my opinion. I sincerely wish you the best. Greg

Feb 18, 2022, 5:44 PM

Also- some of your fellow Councillors had not heard of Harder's "non-whites" comments until Menard said it, and some missed it. If they try to push her further, use that. I know of one Councillor that has had a wake up call since the vote.

Feb 18, 2022, 5:46 PM

Thanks for taking the time to write all that. I will take it to heart. I retweeted Warren because I know many people are talking out of both sides of their mouths. They profess to want deescalation, but would like nothing more than to have police crack a few numb skull heads downtown. That doesn't and should not mean that is what I want. Twitter is dangerous. I will stay off it going forward.

Feb 13, 2022, 5:14 PM ✓

Thanks for messaging me Carol Anne. I hear you. Having been on various other boards myself, I'm hearing the overwhelming outrage as to why the Police Chief isn't being questioned and held responsible, has been derelict in preparation (the convoy gave ample advance notice), didn't create a no-vehicle perimeter (as they do on Canada Day, or G7/G8/G20 events, or visits by heads of state), why police are aiding/assisting/ignoring lawlessness of terrorists, why this response has a decidedly laissez-faire tone than if the protesters were Indigenous, BLM, LGBTQ+, other marginalized communities. I watched the last meeting and was totally aghast that given the seriousness of the situation the questions lobbed at the chief were softball, even when he continued to offer the same excuses and no solutions. In my view the chief and his team allowed this to happen either willfully, or by incompetence (Either way that is grounds for dismissal). The Ottawa insurrection then emboldened the agitators in other jurisdictions. Police response in Toronto, Quebec City, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick was proactive, swift, firm, unequivocal...to protect their communities.

There must be an independent inquiry into such dereliction of duty, negligence & aiding of terrorists by Ottawa Police tasked to serve and protect.

In a private conversation with a current OPS officer he said there were 10000 BLM marchers in Ottawa on one particular occasion. That March ended peacefully and did not terrorize innocent Ottawans. This unlawful anti-vax terrorism is estimated to be smaller, yet OPS are saying they don't have the resources. What they don't have is leadership, planning, organization, cohesion, clearly stated objectives, operational command giving clear instructions to uphold the law or hand in their badge(s).

I acknowledge that this is a difficult and volatile situation, but it is imperative that we have political and police leadership that is up to the task. We pay high taxes and it's not unreasonable to ask for return on our investment. Based on this debacle it would be prudent to ask for the chief's resignation and have a comprehensive inquiry into every aspect of OPS.

Sincerely and constructively,

[REDACTED]

Hi Carol Anne, thanks for the interest in my piece. I think it's an important issue as far as citizens interacting with the government online. I'm not sure I have the expertise to do it justice on radio, but I recommend Mike Gifford who I spoke to for my piece. He's Ottawa local, passionate about the topic and broke it down well for me. Tom Cochran, who gave the presentation that I attended, would also be a great source to talk about why these digital issues matter for doing government business.
